culinary installation

poke bowl

Create the perfect poke bowl: This popular Hawaiian dish incorporates hot and cold elements with raw and cooked proteins, to create a mouth-watering and healthy snack. Watch as our chefs layer organic brown rice with a range of the freshest available ingredients, finished with spicy ponzu dressing and sriracha aioli. Think of it as a delicious deconstructed sushi.

konro bincho robata

Robata cooking originated in ancient Japan, where fishermen would take boxes of burning hot coals on their boats to cook their food as they gathered their catch. The modern robata is a grill modelled after those ancient coal boxes, which imparts a delicate smoky flavour to the food cooked on it. The secret to the cooking process is the bincho-tan coal, made from oak branches, which contains no chemicals and burns at incredibly high heat. Watch as our chefs grill a range of marinated seafood, meats and vegetable skewers over the coals, serving them with traditional dipping sauces and condiments.
