Wine brings to light the hidden secrets of the soul, gives being to our hopes, bids the coward flight, drives dull care away, and teaches new means for the accomplishment of our wishes.

Horace Roman philosopher, (65-8 BC)

BISOL PROSECCO Veneto

Prosecco was produced as far back as Roman times using the Glera grape. This initially grew near the village of Prosecco, at the time known as Puccino.

Vine-growing has always been widespread in the Valdobbiadene zone. A memorial stone in the area recalls the words of a Roman centurion, mentioning the vendemmiales. These were celebrations on the occasion of the grape harvest.

CASTELLO BANFI

Toscana

The heritage of Castello di Poggio alle Mura can be seen in the “conci”. These white stones were traditionally used in the construction of Roman arches and today are found in the main portal of the castello. They show that the site was an important Roman Villa built about 2000 years ago. Castello Banfi combines a sense of tradition with a state of the art winery, bringing Montalcino to the world’s attention in less than 20 years.

ALOIS LAGEDER

Alto Adige

The Reti were the ancient population of Alto Adige, making wine 2000 years ago. They were the first to use barrels and passed on the knowledge of ageing wines in wooden barrels to the Romans. Alois Lageder is at the forefront of sustainable and quality winemaking with the vines farmed bio-dynamically since 2004.

BASTIANICH

Friuli

Winemaking in Friuli dates back to 180 BC when the Romans established their first vineyards in the countryside of Aquileia. Many different varieties are indigenous to the area around Friuli. Today the Bastianich vineyards focus on blending these varieties grown in the dramatically different microclimates in the area.

CANTINA DEL VERMENTINO

Sardegna

The vines of Cantina del Vermentino are planted in soils made of the same granite the Romans used to construct their fortresses and temples. Sardinia's granite soils give Vermentino wine its unique taste, its intensity and refreshing minerality.

BISCEGLIA

Basilicata

The region of Basilicata is often called by the ancient Roman name of Lucania. But local wine making and drinking traditions predate Rome. The Aglianico grape has been grown in Basilicata since the 6th century BC.

During excavation works, a large archaeological site was found in front of the winery. This was likely to have been built by Roman military organization, being part of an important Roman trade route joining Europe to Greece and the Orient.

FRASCATI Lazio

Frascati was one of the great wines of Ancient Rome. Romans referred to it as 'Golden Wine' both for its colour and its value. The town of Frascati was called Tusculum and today archaeologists are discovering evidence of the cultivation of wine grapes since the 5th century BC.

CHATEAU SAINT COSME

Rhone

The talented Louis Barroul is the 14th generation of his family to make wine at Saint Cosme, an ancient property to the north of the village of Gigondas, in the southern Rhone. It lies on the site of a Gallo-Roman villa and is the most ancient estate in the region. There are even the remains of a Roman cellar still visible in the property's caves and the original Gallo-Roman fermentation vats are perfectly preserved.

JABOULET

Rhone

The Rhone Valley was first cultivated around 600 BC by Greeks. But it was the Romans who established the region's vineyards and reputation, using the Rhone as their highway through France. The Romans also introduced both the syrah and viognier grapes to the region.

KIR YIANNI Macedonia

Wine was produced over wide areas of ancient Greece. Not only in Athens and the Peloponnese but also on the islands. The first signs of vine cultivation are found in eastern Macedonia and a recent excavation near Krinides, Kavala, uncovered grape seeds dating from the end of the prehistoric period. Greek wines had especially high prestige in Italy under the Roman Empire and were transported from end to end of the Mediterranean.

Macedonia has been producing wine since the very early Roman times when its emperors favoured its grapes.

VIVANCO Rioja

The Rioja region was conquered by the Ancient Romans in the early 2nd century BC. Romans established vineyards and bodegas to supply Roman troops. Archaeological exploration has uncovered evidence of a local cistern from that period with the capacity to hold 75,000 litres of wine. It's believed that when the Romans settled in Bordeaux, some of the plant cuttings that they took with them may have originated in Rioja vineyards, in the form of an ancient vine Balisca.

The Vivanco Museum of Wine Culture celebrates the history of wine over 8,000 years, looking at what inspired the Romans, the Greeks and the Egyptians to become wine makers.
